MESSAGE FROM RABBI KRAMER

Dear B'nai Jehudah Family,

There is a particular light that comes at this time of year: soft, searching and honest. The High Holy Days draw near again, and with them, a sacred invitation: to step out of the rush of ordinary time and enter a season of renewal, a season of beginning again.

Our tradition speaks of this season as a kind of turning of the heart and soul. Like the earth shifting toward a new cycle, we are asked to loosen what has hardened within us and to open ourselves to possibility. What do you want to carry forward from this past year? And what are you ready to release? Where have you grown, and where are you still becoming?

This year, these questions feel especially urgent. With rising antisemitism worldwide and close to home, it can be easy to feel alone. Yet our tradition and our community insist otherwise.

We are not alone.

We are a people who gather and a community who shows up. We build something sacred not only through prayer, but by choosing to stand beside one another, to lift one another and to be for each other the kind of compassion, strength and dignity we ourselves most need. In a world that can feel fractured, we create wholeness here. In a world that can feel uncertain, we root ourselves in enduring covenant and care.

B'nai Jehudah is not just a place; it is something we create each time we show up, offer a smile, a listening ear or a helping hand. This community is built by each of us coming as we are, and as who we hope to be for each other.

As we prepare for 5787, I invite you to enter this season as one might enter a new garden: hopeful, intentional and ready to tend to what matters. Join us in person or online, bring your questions, gratitude and even your doubts. All are welcome.

If someone you know needs the strength of community, invite them. Now, more than ever, our presence matters. Everyone is welcome at B'nai Jehudah.

May this season renew your spirit and strengthen your sense of belonging. Even in uncertain times, we can create something beautiful and enduring together.

Wishing you a year of courage, connection and renewed purpose.

Shanah tovah,

Rabbi Stephanie Kramer

SISTERHOOD JUDAICA SHOP

The Sisterhood Judaica Shop is run entirely by Sisterhood volunteers. All our proceeds benefit B'nai Jehudah and support our congregation. We stock an assortment of holiday and lifecycle ritual items, as well as jewelry and home decor. We offer a gift registry for b'nai mitzvah, weddings and conversions. With both online and in-person shopping available, why shop anywhere else for Judaica? Plus, Sisterhood members always receive 10% off their purchase! Appointments outside our regular hours can be made by contacting Marcia Soltz at mksoltz@gmail.com or Pam Auerbach at sampowerpak@gmail.com.
