Book of Remembrance

We Remember

We remember those whose decisions gave form and meaning to our lives, those whose love and companionship added richness and warmth to our days.

Those whose love for us can be expressed no more,
but for whom the sweet song of our love is sung with ever-increasing fervor.

We include their names in this book as testimony to our continuing dedication to all that they held dear. May their memory remain alive within us and prompt us to worthy aspirations and deeds of loving kindness.

It was good to live

"I feel that it was good to live, even if all the life we had began and ended here on earth. It was good to be warmed by the sun. It was good to have rejoiced in the beauties of nature, to have the heart gladdened by a flower and the mind illuminated by a star, to have loved and kissed a woman, to have looked into the eyes of an innocent child and caught there a glimpse of Divinity which was shining in them.

"It was good to have worked and struggled and even suffered: to have thought, to have aspired, to have done the day's duty, to have achieved something, no matter how limited its scope, to have been a partner of Divinity in building the world of spirit, the world of truth and right and goodness.

"If there is a future after the grave is closed on man, I welcome it, as I welcome everything from the Giver of all things. If retribution awaits me...I take that, too, from my Father in heaven. If joy awaits me, I thank Him in advance.

"But it was good to live, even if life on earth were all that there is of conscious life for the individual. The duty of obeying His law, the privilege of doing His will, the joy of living at all, are sufficient for me. If I have been only a little insignificant reed through which the Eternal played an individual tune, it was glory, enough for me to have been that tiny, feeble but individual voice in the mysterious kingdom which He is building. And if when my work is done He sees fit to cast me away like a broken whistle, like a shard and say, 'It is over,' I will still believe it was a joy to serve Him and it was the manifestation of His grace for which I will continue to thank Him as long as there is breath in me on earth.

"To my mind, the destiny of the individual, as Judaism teaches it in accordance with the deepest trend of its whole history, is to feel God's presence here, to be zealous in doing His will, to be content with the revealed, to leave the mystery entirely to Him. The supreme achievement of human freedom is to triumph over self and personality and to recognize that there is only One absolute personality. The complete education of man is to be found in his capacity for complete surrender to God...I lose myself in God because I am convinced of His perfect love in whatever He does with me."

SAMUEL SCHULMAN

RABBI OF CONGREGATION B'NAI JEHUDAH, 1893-1899

In Loving Remembrance

We make every effort to ensure all names are listed accurately. If your name or a loved one's name is missing or misspelled, please contact info@bnaijehudah.org, or (913) 663-4050 so we may update your listing.

The Temple, Congregation B'nai Jehudah

OUR CORE PURPOSE

To Nurture Jewish Meaning, Connection and Continuity

OUR CORE VALUES

Open Hearts, K'dushah (Holiness) and Derech Eretz (Common Decency)

OUR BHAG (BIG HOLY AWESOME GOAL)

Every congregant pursues an individualized Jewish path. In so doing, the individual, the community and the world become better.
